DESCRIPTION OF JOB PROFILES

Introduction

In the framework of the NEW DEAL project, partners member of the Group of Trainers were asked to select 5 professional profiles, typical of the economic sector chosen for the experimentation, that is the large scale retail trade. Each profile had to be described as regards specific tasks and activities, competencies needed (in terms of knowledge, skills and attitudes) for a new employee willing to perform that job.

Furthermore, the profiles selected and described, are accompanied by the definition of a modular training path to attain the requested skills to perform the role: the path is composed by a mix of training methodologies, such as on the job, classroom and distance learning. Therefore each profile sees one or more pattern training units, describing the learning outcomes expected, the prior knowledge/experience requested, the contents, the duration, the training methodologies and tools, the assessment methodology, etc.

Each profile and related path will be translated in all partners languages and published on the website. The paths are developed in a modular way, that is, can be taken partly and as far as possible in different sequence, so that each new employee will be enabled to take only the parts of units necessary to his/her skills development, according to his/her entry competences and career objectives.

Before going to the description of profiles and related paths of skills development for the new employees, partners had to explain the respective concepts of new employee and find some common features.

The 5 profiles selected mainly concerns the activities related to selling, although with different features. The profiles are:

- Sales professional
- Sales activities
- Shelving self service
- Sales manager
- Administrative assistant

Each profile in this document is therefore followed by the description of the relating path to attain expected competencies.

New employee: some definition

Researchers and managers use the term 'new' to describe organizational members who have recently joined an organization, but how long are arriving recruits considered 'new employees', and what factors drive this new-to-old transition? The term "new employee" is commonplace in both organizational research and managerial practice. Researchers use the term to define a subset of organizational members that have recently entered an organization, and argue that the initial experiences of these members in the first weeks, months, or years after entry have major implications for the members' entire organizational career (Berlew & Hall, 1966).

Partners have proposed some definitions, that are described in this document. Then they agreed on few issues in order to identify a shared definition and recognize target groups for testing the model.

Oviedo Chamber of Commerce – SPAIN

New employee is the person who starts to develop a new professional activity, either because it is his/her first job in a company or because he/she is changing function, responsibilities or position inside the company where he/she has been working.

INSUP – FRANCE

When a company is recruiting a candidate for a position, the candidate is a NEW EMPLOYEE since he signs his labour contract to the end of the trial period.

He is considered like a new employee during his trial period : 1 month for a employee extensible to 2 months, 3 months extensible to 6 months for a manager.

Labour literature calls "JUNIOR", a new employee from the end of trial period to 3 years spent in the same position.

LEBOTERF says a New employee is a person who has to familiarize with the job (activities, process), the culture of the company (management, internal rules): he also explains that the context of the job is essential to explain the success or failure on the position.

NWRC – UK

Good customer care skills are essential when applying for a job as a sales assistant.

It is helpful if the new employee already has some experience of working with the public.

Good literacy and numeracy skills are also useful, for example for when handling cash.

New employees may also be able to start this career through an Apprenticeship scheme.

New employees need to be

- good communicators
- able to get on well with people
- able to work as part of a team
- friendly, polite and helpful
- confident and tactful
- energetic
- reliable and responsible
- honest

AVM – LITHUANIA

New employee is a person who has knowledge and skills in a certain professional area and seeks to be employed in a new company/organization.

Adaptation and integration processes are required to support a new employee for the introduction to the new job position.

For new employee we mean a young person (18 - 29 y.o.) joining a company through a so-called "contratto a causa mista" (literally "mixed-type contract"). This contract implies some training; for example, apprenticeship contracts are included in this category. Also some training is implied in the training-on-the-job programme framework (which is not an employment contract; for example the so-called "tirocinio formativo", which is a type of internship).

An individual (young or adult) joining a company with an employment contract (either permanent or temporary), who does not yet possess the specific skills or expertise of the job for which they are applying.

An individual (young or adult) already working in a given position, for whom the company wants to develop a career path, to prepare him/her for a position higher than his/her current position (for example, a salesperson who becomes a department manager).

New employee definition: shared issues

1. A new employee is a person who is working for the first time in the company or in the job/position

2. Usually companies define skills that must be already possessed by the candidate (to be verified through a job interview), and new skills, to be developed through classic training and/or training on the job.

3. Duration of employment during which the worker can be defined as a new employee: 0-1 year (better 0-6 months)

4. A new employee, in addition to having to learn and develop technical skills (directly related to the job position) and soft skills, must be able to adapt his/her knowledge and expertise to the specific context and to corporate culture.

Requirements for trainers

Minimum One of these Accreditations: Graduate, Superior Grade of VET on the professional family of Commercial and Marketing, Professional certificate level 3 on purchase and sales on the professional family of Commercial and Marketing.

Professional experience required on the training area: 2 years from people with Accreditation or 4 years for people without accreditation.

Learning Methods

It is recommended an adequate balance between theoretical and practical methods, like lectures and assignments, demonstrations, group work, dialogue, real practices, case studies, etc.

Suggested strategy of assessment

In order to provide a global assessment of learning process it is recommended a continuous assessment or Formative assessment. This type of assessment takes place over a period of learning or practice. It is a supportive format that is designed to give learners appropriate feedback about how well they are doing over a period of time. This feedback assists in guiding future efforts and enables you to identify when the candidate may be ready for the assessment to be conducted.

Common methods include:

Observation. The most valuable way of collecting evidence is through observation. You can do this through:

♦ demonstration
♦ simulation
♦ role play
♦ video.

Whenever you are using the observation method, you should use an observation checklist so that you can take notes of what you're observing during the assessment and refer to these notes later when making the assessment decision.

Questioning. Questioning is an important part of the assessment process, not only to help you assess underpinning knowledge and employability skills, but also to clarify or seek additional information during the assessment process. You can ask questions:

♦ during a demonstration as long as it is not disruptive
♦ at the end of training
♦ in the form of a written or oral test.

Product and/or process. A final product and/or process that candidates complete is an excellent way to prove competency. However, it is not always easy to do. Here are some things you can use to help you gather evidence.

♦ portfolio of evidence
♦ a structured interview
♦ a third party report
♦ a sample of a finished product.

Learning support materials

It will be provided accurate documents based on the unit contents will be developed for this training unit, including specific exercises, extra information, videos and simulation cases.

Requirements for trainers:

Minimum One of these Accreditations: Graduate, Superior Grade of VET on the professional family of Commercial and Marketing, Professional certificate level 3 on purchase and sales on the professional family of Commercial and Marketing.

Professional experience required on the training area: 2 years from people with Accreditation or 4 years for people without accreditation.

Learning Methods

It is recommended and adequate balance between theoretical and practical methods, like lectures and assignments, demonstrations, group work, dialogue, real practices, case studies, etc.

Suggested strategy of assessment

In order to provide a global assessment of learning process it is recommended a continuous assessment or Formative assessment. This type of assessment takes place over a period of learning or practice. It is a supportive format that is designed to give learners appropriate feedback about how well they are doing over a period of time. This feedback assists in guiding future efforts and enables you to identify when the candidate may be ready for the assessment to be conducted.

Common methods include:

Observation. The most valuable way of collecting evidence is through observation. You can do this through:
- demonstration
- simulation
- role play
- video.

Whenever you are using the observation method, you should use an observation checklist so that you can take notes of what you're observing during the assessment and refer to these notes later when making the assessment decision.

Questioning. Questioning is an important part of the assessment process, not only to help you assess underpinning knowledge and employability skills, but also to clarify or seek additional information during the assessment process. You can ask questions:

- during a demonstration as long as it is not disruptive
- at the end of training
- in the form of a written or oral test.

Product and/or process. A final product and/or process that candidates complete is an excellent way to prove competency. However, it is not always easy to do. Here are some things you can use to help you gather evidence.

- portfolio of evidence
- a structured interview
- a third party report
- a sample of a finished product.

Learning support materials

It will be provided accurate documents based on the unit contents will be developed for this training unit, including specific exercises, extra information, videos and simulation cases.

SALES MANAGER: PATHWAY TO ATTAIN COMPETENCES

Training Unit 1. Sales Manager (Level 5)

Description

The program designed is for professional education Level 5 (EQF and LTQF) for sales managers in retail business, specifically for those employees working or planning their career development in a trading company, store or shop or any trading company sales department.

The program covers 120 ECTS and is built of 12 training units (TU). A unit is defined as a coherent and explicit set of learning outcomes and assessment criteria with a title, credit value and level. Units share a common set of characteristics and can be used separately or be combined to support the creation of coherent programs of learning.

Within this set of units, learners will have the opportunity to build their achievements from a single unit, leading to a Certificate up to a composite qualification leading to a Diploma.

Two learning pathways - formal and non-formal - are recommended, depending on the learners prior knowledge, experience and choice for progression. These learning paths are designed to suit learners working towards level 5 qualification.

RPL is recommended in case of informal learning. Learners may apply to claim for credit transfer and exemption where they have completed relevant units and qualifications from other awarding organizations. Credit transfer will be based on confirmation of achievement of the units.

Competences

The table below illustrates the bridging between EQF and LTQF level 5 descriptors:

LTQF level 5

LTQF level 5 descriptor		EQF level 5 descriptor
Original	Divided into knowledge, skills and competence
The qualification is intended for activities distinguished by integrated coordination of activity tasks in different activity areas. The activities include the evaluation of the competences of lower-qualification employees and training thereof. The activities require coordination of comprehensive knowledge of the activity area with general knowledge in dealing with various specialised activity tasks in several different activity areas.	Knowledge Comprehensive factual and theoretical knowledge within different activity areas. Knowledge required in dealing with various specialised activity tasks in several different activity areas.	Knowledge Comprehensive, specialised, factual and theoretical knowledge within a field of work or study and an awareness of the boundaries of that knowledge.
The employee performs the activities independently and is supervised only as regards the evaluation of results. The activity tasks are set by an employee of a higher qualification, who frequently grants the employee performing the activities the discretion as to the choice of methods and measures to complete the tasks. The employee supervises the activities of lower-qualification staff, plans and assigns activity tasks, oversees the performance of the activities, provides consulting and verifies the performance quality.	Skills Cognitive skills cover not only the application of knowledge in a particular area of activity but also coordinating knowledge of the activity area with general knowledge. Practical skills are used to solve specialised activity tasks in several different activity areas. The individual learns to compositely coordinate task solution across different activity areas. A person of this qualification chooses task solution methods and measures.	Skills A comprehensive range of cognitive and practical skills required to develop creative solutions to abstract problems.

Suggested strategy of delivery

Methods of delivery are not prescribed any to a training organization. Organizations are free to use any methods of delivery suitable to their learners. Methods may include open, distance, blended or online learning. In qualifications with more than one unit, units may be delivered and assessed in any order.

Suggested strategy of assessment

Learners will need to show that they meet each of the assessment criteria detailed within each unit and to the required standard for the level of the unit.

The assessor is responsible for assessing the learning against the assessment criteria in the unit.

Assessment routes

There are four possible routes to fulfilling the assessment criteria for each unit, and each route is equally valid:

Route A is via Work Based Evidence

Route B is via Model Assignment

Route C is via Contextualized Model Assignment

Route D is via Institution Devised Assignment.

One route must be chosen per learner per unit. In cases with more than one learner assessment may be organized for some learners through one route and other learners through another route at the same time or over a period of time. Learners taking qualifications consisting of more than one unit can provide evidence through one route for one unit and through other routes for other units. However, evidence for one unit for one learner must be from one route only.

Route A: Work based evidence

This route is available for learners employed in sales who have the opportunity to produce work based evidence showing that they have met the assessment criteria through their employment. Evidence must be generated through their day to day work and may take any format, as long as it produces relevant tangible evidence which can be accessed by a third party.

Examples of types of evidence are:

♦ Witness statements

♦ Observations of performance in the work environment

♦ Learner statements

♦ Written evidence such as diaries, emails, reports, presentation slides

♦ Photos

♦ Video recordings

♦ Interview or viva voce

♦ Project documentation

♦ Verbal presentations.

This list is not conclusive.

Work based evidence may be built up over time and assessment criteria in the unit can be 'ticked off' gradually until they are all met. At the time of assessment against the particular assessment criterion, evidence must be current i.e. produced within the past three years. Evidence must be authentic i.e. produced by the learner.

Work based evidence should be assessed holistically, and one piece of evidence may cover more than one assessment criterion. One piece of evidence may be used for assessment across different units and across different qualifications, provided it meets the relevant assessment criteria.

Route B: Model Assignment

A Model Assignment is available for each assessed unit, which provides the learner with the opportunity to meet all the assessment criteria in the unit. The Model Assignment consists of one or more tasks, based on a fictional yet realistic sales situation. Information is to be provided to the learners on the Model Assignment, the deadlines, procedures of monitoring progress and assessing learner work against the assessment criteria.

Route C: Contextualized Model Assignment

A Contextualized Model Assignment gives the opportunity of adapting the Model Assignment, to tailor it to the needs and interests of the learners. For example, the setting of the Model Assignment may be changed from a car sales situation to a pharmaceuticals sales situation. A Contextualized Model Assignment must enable learners to meet all of the assessment criteria for the unit.

Route D: Institution Devised Assignment

Institutions can create their own Institution Devised Assignment from scratch using the Assignment Template. Institution Devised Assignment must enable the learner to meet all of the assessment criteria for the unit. The assignment may consist of one or more tasks.

Institutions choosing this route must ensure that each institution Devised Assignment:

1. permits the learner to meet all of the assessment criteria in the unit

2. is relevant to the content of the unit

3. has clear instructions to the learner as to what is expected

4. has clear instructions to the learner regarding the duration of the assignment (if it is a timed activity), and what reference or other material they may use (if any) to complete it

5. contains language free from any bias

6. contains language and technical terms at the appropriate level for the learner.

Learning support materials

Learning resources – books, periodicals and database - are included for each individual unit.

Syllabus of the units would cover various learning support aspects, including access to other learning materials on Virtual learning environment platforms.
